

WIFE THREATENED HIM WITH GUN TO GET LOVE LETTER

So Charges C. L. Wise, Naming Her Lawyer, in Answer to Separation Suit.

In answer to the suit of Clara L. Wise of No. 213 East Twenty-eighth street, Flatbush, for a separation from C. L. Wise, lace manufacturer, at No. 461 Broadway, the husband laid an affidavit before Justice Kapper today in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn telling of alleged strong-arm methods used by his wife and her nineteen-year-old son to get damaging papers away from him.

Mr. Wise said his home was happy until last summer, when Frank Perry Hood, a Philadelphia lawyer, who had settled the estate of Mrs. Wise's mother, visited them. After that, he says, his wife seemed to lose the affection which she had showed her husband when he married her in 1907, and complained of her life in Flatbush, saying she would be more comfortable in a convent.

When Mrs. Wise was ill Nov. 13 last, Mr. Wise continues, she sent him to her desk to look for something she needed. In his search he ran across a letter to her from Hood. He read part of it and then demanded an explanation.

Mrs. Wise, he said, demanded the letter; he took it to his study, locked himself in and slept through the night on a couch. In the morning William Herndon, his stepson, forced his way in and demanded the letter. Mr. Wise did not surrender it.

On his way downstairs to breakfast in his pajamas, Mr. Wise said, his wife called to him for $5 to pay a manicure bill. He paid no attention to her. She then asked him to give her a dose of medicine. While he was bending over her, Mr. Wise swears, stepson William rushed in and pinioned his arms from behind. Mrs. Wise drew a revolver from under her pillow.

"I pray the Lord for strength," Mr. Wise quoted his wife as saying, "to do what I must. William, have you the other gun in your pocket?"

William nodded, says Mr. Wise. Just then the doorbell rang and the girl came upstairs with the card of an architect who had an engagement with Mr. Wise. Wise says he ran from the house dressed only in his pajamas, a sweater, a dressing gown and slippers, and telephoned to the Parkville police from an elevated railroad station. They did not come to his rescue, so he telephoned for a taxi and went to the Hotel Albert in New York, where his partner brought him clothing. Respected demands for his clothes, he says, were denied by his wife, who did not send them to him until she had a letter from Lawyer Hood, addressing her as "Dear Madam," advising her to release the clothes. She sent the letter with them.

In all this time, Mr. Wise said, he had hung on to the letter that caused the trouble, which he appended to his answer. Part of it was as follows: "Dear Lillian: In any event, dear, there is a leak somewhere and we must be careful regarding any one of whom we make confidants. There is nothing to worry about, honey, but it is a warning hint to us to keep more to ourselves."

With regard to his wife's charge that he had threatened her with a razor and a revolver, Wise asserts he once had a safety razor in his hand, when he was talking to her, but nothing worse. Mrs. Wise asked for $5 a month alimony and $500 counsel fee. She said her husband was frequently in the company of other women. Justice Kapper remarked that the husband's charges were serious, and that Mrs. Wise was entitled to an allowance for hiring an excellent lawyer.

Other Loses His Leg.
Thomas Morris, thirty-five years old, an older in the employ of the New York Central Railway Company at his yards at Fortieth street and Lexington avenue, had his right leg caught in the flywheel of one of the dynamos this afternoon. The leg was amputated at Flower Hospital, where the victim now is in a precarious condition.

UNFORTUNATE.
From the Chicago Record Herald.
"They say that Mrs. Waddington's little boy is ambidextrous," said Mrs. Oldcastle.
"Land sakes!" exclaimed Mrs. Gottalotte. "Is that too bad? Ain't it too bad? They expected he was going to be all right after they got his tonsils out out."

SUSPEND DETECTIVE ON CHARGE OF MAN HE HAD ARRESTED

Unterman Says Van Cott Asked Him to "Cough Up" for His Finger Prints.

Detective-Sergeant Harry M. Van Cott, assigned to the West Seventeenth street police station, was today suspended, pending an investigation into charges made by Leo Unterman of No. 226 Tenth street. Unterman was arrested by Van Cott on Jan. 21 on a charge of grand larceny. He was held in the Police Court for the Grand Jury. The complaining witness failed to appear and the Grand Jury failed to indict.

Unterman says that he went to the Detective Bureau and asked for the return of his finger prints. He was told that they had been destroyed as was the custom. He says that he was not notified and was referred to Van Cott, who told him that he would have to "cough up" before getting the prints. He made affidavit to the charges and the suspension of the detective-sergeant followed.

Van Cott was appointed to the force on May 6, 1911, and has a splendid record. He was assigned to the old Twenty-first Precinct, and when transferred from there Alderman Curran, on behalf of himself and residents of the precinct, addressed a letter to Commissioner Waldo asking for his return on account of his efficient service. Van Cott was sent to the West Seventeenth street station, which has taken the place of the old Twentieth Precinct.

On the night of Oct. 24, 1912, the policeman with two others made a sensational capture of British Rice, alias Herschorn and Samuel Tebbroad, notorious bank burglars and lost workers. The men were surprised in the act of carrying off $5,000 worth of furs from the loft of S. Werner, in the building of Nos. 134-136 West Twenty-sixth street. The burglars had blown a hole in the roof and effected an entrance into the loft. A pistol duel followed in which Tebbroad was wounded. Both criminals are now in Sing Sing. For his brave work on this occasion Van Cott was made a detective sergeant. Since his promotion his career has been an active one. He has made a good many arrests.

NEW GRAFT WITNESS BACKS SIPP'S CHARGES.

Saw Patrolman Fox Accept Money and Knew What It Was For, He Tells Whitman.

It was announced at the District Attorney's office today that what appears to be positive corroboration of the accusations of George A. Sipp, the Harlem former divekeeper, against Patrolman Eugene Fox has been obtained. This corroboration is to come from a man—name not revealed—who spent considerable time in a conference with the District Attorney today.

It is said that the District Attorney's visitor on several occasions saw Sipp make payments to Fox, knew the amount of each payment and what the payment was intended to cover. The identity of the witness will be kept secret until he is brought forward as a witness against Fox, whose trial will begin next Monday.

No trace has yet been found of Thomas J. Dorian, the corroborative witness who disappeared after giving his testimony to the Aldermanic Committee. The District Attorney hopes to get hold of Dorian before Fox's trial is concluded, but even if Dorian remains hidden it is expected that the corroboration of the witness examined to-day and Sipp's son and Sipp's wife will be sufficient.

"WANT OF CONFIDENCE" VOTED FIRST TIME BY GERMAN PARLIAMENT

Rights of Poles Force Issue and House by 213 to 97 Hits Government; Makes History.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—The German Imperial Parliament today passed for the first time in its history a vote of want of confidence in the government.

The question before the House was the approval of the government's reply to the interpellation of the Chancellor by the Poles yesterday who asked what the Chancellor intended to do to "prevent the expropriation of Polish landowners in Prussia by the Prussian government, a measure irreconcilable with the spirit of the imperial constitution."

The House today carried by 213 against 97 a resolution of disapproval of Dr. Hermann Loebe's reply in which he stated that the matter was a purely internal one for Prussia and had nothing to do with the imperial parliament.

The Poles, Catholics and Socialists joined to form the majority. The Pro-Prussians in the House abstained from voting arguing that the imperial parliament was without jurisdiction on a question affecting one of the States of the empire.

PRISONER WALKED OUT.
SHERIFF Let 12 Visitors in Jail and Saw 13 Leave.

RELVIERE, N. J., Jan. 30.—A prisoner who walked out of the Warren County jail last night under the nose of Sheriff Henderson has not yet been captured. He is Anthony O'Donnell of Allentown, Pa., accused of having broken into New Jersey Central freight cars at Philadelphia and stolen merchandise. The sheriff admitted twelve visitors to the jail. He did not know O'Donnell was there. At closing hour thirteen persons started to leave the jail. The sheriff supposed the thirteen had been admitted by the Prussian government, a measure irreconcilable with the spirit of the imperial constitution.

At time to lock prisoners in their cells it was found that O'Donnell was missing.
